

THE DAILY BEE.

OMAHA. Saturday Morning, March 15.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

New crop clover and timothy seed for sale. Shegart, Waite & Wiles, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

In police court yesterday one drunk, a colored man, put in an appearance and was fined $10 and costs. In default of payment he was sent up to the county jail.

The C. B. & Q. through train came in on time yesterday. Attached to the train was a new sleeping car, the "Burnham." It is an elegantly finished car and this is the first trip. It is of the "Buffet" pattern, but this part is not in use at present.

Mattie Stitts, a notorious prostitute, created a disturbance in a saloon at the corner of Eleventh and Capitol avenue Thursday. She was arrested and lodged in jail. This morning in police court she pleaded not guilty and her case was continued.

Emma Angell yesterday instituted suit against Caleb Clapp & Co., of Chicago, to recover $25,000 damages. This action arises out of the closing out of the stock of jewelry formerly owned by Angell, Bowen & White, whose store was on Fifteenth street, between Douglas and Farnam.

The governor has offered $300 reward for the capture of Price, who was implicated in the shooting at the Comique last Sunday night. Now there is an opportunity for some of these people who know he is in the city and can place their finger upon him at any time to do so and secure the $300.

In the District Court yesterday, before Judge Neville, the jury in the case of Schroeder against Wallers returned a verdict for the plaintiff of $450. The case of Berry against Blagden was taken up. This is an appeal from a verdict in favor of the value of a clasp. Before Judge Wakely the case of Clapp against Miller is still on trial.

In the report of the district court proceeding of Wednesday, The Bee made it appear that Constable Edgerton had lost two suits, one of which he was assessed five cents and in the other $390. The latter judgment was in the case of Rathbun vs. Wyman of the Commercial College, instead of Edgerton. The jury's verdict is perfectly willing to pay five cents, but the second judgment is a parody.

A petition was filed in the United States district court yesterday by George M. Waggoner, stating that he is illegally deprived of his liberty by General John Gibbon, department commander of the Platte, and praying that a writ of habeas corpus issue. Waggoner is a member of company B, Fourth Infantry regiment stationed now at Fort Omaha, and claims to be under twenty-one years of age and by reason of his non-age is entitled to be freed from the army by the court.

The Des Moines Leader of the 13th, died yesterday morning at half past six o'clock. He arrived in the city Tuesday afternoon from Omaha, and was accompanied by his cousin, J. C. Ross. It is learned he was recovering from a long illness when he left Omaha for his home in Okaloosa, fearing a relapse. He was taken very badly just before reaching this city, so that his cousin thought it best for him to stop off here and rest. He was rapidly worse as the train neared here, and was unable to speak when the train reached the depot. He did not speak at all after arriving here. His remains were taken to his home last evening.

The following from a Hall county paper: "Last Sunday afternoon Sheriff Cannon received a telegram from the sheriff of Douglas county, stating that one Charles Shreiber, an Omaha murderer, was supposed to be in Hall county, somewhere near Grand Island, and that a reward of $300 would be given for his arrest and delivery to the authorities of Douglas county. Our sheriff being at once to work up the case, and soon learned that a man of the same name and answering the same description was in the employment of Fred Otto, a German farmer living a few miles north of town, and he lost no time in going out to interview him. Arriving at Mr. Otto's he had no difficulty in finding his man who he at once arrested and brought back to town. The identity of the prisoner was at first not clear, but the sheriff was quite confident that he had the man he wanted and accordingly held him to await the arrival of parties from Omaha. Sheriff Miller, of that place, arrived Sunday evening and took the man in charge, but before their departure for Omaha the prisoner made confession to Cannon and admitted having committed the murder for which he was under arrest. He was taken to Omaha, Sunday evening, where a terrible fate undoubtedly awaits him, but if his own confession is true he certainly deserves it, and Sheriff Cannon is entitled to a mint of praise for his successful effort in bringing him face to face with justice.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve. The greatest medical wonder of the world. Warranted to speedily cure Burns, Cuts, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Cancer, Piles, Chilblains, Corns, Tetter, Chapped hands, and all skin eruptions, guaranteed to cure in every instance, or money refunded. 25 cents a box.

Amusements. M. B. Curtis entertained a very large audience at the opera house last night in his novel picture "Sam'l o' Posen." The play abounds in fun and was well presented. Mr. Curtis in his title role of "Samuel Plastick," the commercial drummer, was exceedingly clever and in this novel character has struck a popular vein. He was several times called before the curtain. The character of "Mr. Winslow" was well presented by Harry Pearson. F. G. Campbell portrayed the character of "Frank Bronson," an unscrupulous villain, to the satisfaction of the audience. "Jack Chevier" was presented by Edgar M. Davenport. Mr. Davenport is a brother of the noted Fanny Davenport and is a young actor of no mean ability, as his last night's work demonstrated. Miss Albina De Mer as "Mlle Celeste," was very pleasing and possessed considerable talent, and although her accent is decidedly strong it is not in the least unpleasant. Miss Jessie Milman as "Rebecca," and Miss Corie Radcliffe as "Ellen," were both very acceptable.

Satisfactorily settled. A few days since C. Specht brought suit against George P. Clark, charging him with having obtained $100 from plaintiff under false pretenses.

The matter has been satisfactorily settled and the charges and papers withdrawn, and it is stated that he is simply a misunderstanding between Mr. Specht and Mr. Clark, which led to a suit.

A NEBRASKA NOVEL.

Or at Least One Whose Growing Chapter Has This State for its Scene.

An Ohio Husband and Wife, Separated by Misunderstandings, Reunited in Douglas County.

From nothing, the imagination of man often creates beings which compel him to take steps which lead him to destruction or make his life one of clouds through which the sun of happiness and pleasure never shines. A phantasm, a hallucination takes possession of the mind, which by constant pondering and ruminating upon it is led to believe in its actual existence, although it has never been anything else than a mental creation. That these statements are true is proven by

A STORY OF REAL LIFE, a part of whose scenes is laid in this county, the facts and incidents of which sound like romance. In the year 1871, in the beautiful city of Zanesville, Ohio, Max Randall, then a boy of twenty summers, led to the altar Miss Jennie Mitchell, a beautiful girl of eighteen years, the daughter of Dr. John Mitchell, a leading physician of that town, and one of its most honored citizens. Mr. Randall was a pharmacist by profession, and had always sustained a character above reproach. The marriage was a most happy one, the husband and wife working together in their efforts to make life most pleasant and agreeable. Two years after they had been married a little girl was added to the number of Randall's household.

THE SUN OF PROSPERITY continually dawned upon him, and his every effort was crowned with success. When their little girl was about two years old a lucrative situation in a drug store in Kansas City was tendered him, which he accepted, and taking his wife and child he came to that city flushed with hope. The situation he had accepted he filled with credit to himself and satisfaction to his employers. Time and acquaintance won for him the confidence of all who knew him. The energy and knowledge which he put into his business soon gave him an enviable reputation among all the druggists of that city. A couple of years after he had come west another little face was added to his household gods, and

HIS CUP OF HAPPINESS now seemed full to overflowing. In the year 1880 Randall determined to study medicine and become a physician. From his knowledge of drugs a great step had been made in that direction and the existence of a medical institution in that city made it an easy matter for him to hold his situation and at the same time attend college. In March two years ago he graduated from the Kansas City Medical Institute at the head of a class of fifty.

WINNING THE FACULTY PRIZE of $100 in gold. To this add to his honor he was elected valedictorian by the members of his class. The future to him was filled with visions of success as he peered into the entrance to his professional career. Shortly after he had been titled an M. D., his wife became importunate in her wishes and demands to return and live among the scenes of her childhood, the remembrance of her childhood days seemed to have crested in her an insatiable yearning to see again the green pastures which her youthful memory had painted as ever-covered with verdure, to visit the old school-house, and to see once again her fond parents, from whom she had parted with tears and an aching heart, and to remain near them in their declining years.

HER HUSBAND RELUCTANTLY CONSENTED, and returned to Roseville, a little village near Zanesville. There he set out to establish for himself a practice in his profession. Luckily again, success crowned his professional efforts, but notwithstanding this a cancer was gnawing at his breast. It seemed to him that the wife for whom he was willing to make every sacrifice had since her return become changed in her affections toward him, and that her relatives and friends were using every means toward an estrangement.

IN A FIT OF DESPONDENCY one night in March of 1883 he told his wife he had a call out ten miles in the country and would not return until nearly morning. He mounted his horse, and never was seen by his wife afterwards until yesterday. When he did not return the following morning a search was instituted for him. His horse was found riderless at the stable of his wife's father. A couple of miles down the bank of the river which flows through Roseville his silk hat was found, and in it a large hole, such as would be made by a sharp instrument. Other articles of his clothing were found there also, all looking as if his owner had at the hands of a ruffian. His body was hunted after many days, but finally all search for it was given up. The wife thought herself a widow. A couple of months ago she received a letter from a friend, W. M. Covey, who lives in Kansas City, stating that he believed her husband was in Douglas county, Nebraska. Constable Edgerton, of this city, was employed to learn the truth of the matter. Randall was found by him, and admitted his identity. Word was sent his wife, and Mr. Covey, without Randall's knowledge, and by a singular coincidence,

BOTH ARRIVED IN OMAHA on Thursday morning without any previous concerted arrangement. They both took the noon train of that day for Millard in this county where Randall was teaching school. Mr. Covey went to the school house and renewed his friendship of two years ago. Without telling him where his wife was Randall was invited over to search for it was given up. The wife thought herself a widow. A couple of months ago she received a letter from a friend, W. M. Covey, who lives in Kansas City, stating that he believed her husband was in Douglas county, Nebraska. Constable Edgerton, of this city, was employed to learn the truth of the matter. Randall was found by him, and admitted his identity. Word was sent his wife, and Mr. Covey, without Randall's knowledge, and by a singular coincidence, on her part or any attempt on the part of her relatives to make one. Against all these supplications and entreaties he remained obstinate and determined not to yield, but at length his feelings could no longer be repressed. The petitions of her who in her youth "had plighted her faith and trusted her peace to him" overcame him. He covered his face and wept. Their lives were reunited, vows of eternal love sworn again, and a complete reconciliation brought about. The party then went to the hotel where the plans for the future were discussed. It was finally decided that Mrs. Randall should remain in Nebraska for a couple of weeks, at which time Mr. Randall's term of school will be closed. He has been engaged for a second term in the same district, but thinks these new complications which have so suddenly upon him may cause the school board to RESCIND THEIR CONTRACT with him or the coming term. Mrs. Randall will remain here until this matter is decided. Should he teach another term she will go back to Ohio and in due time will return with their children. If the present term closes his labors he will go back with his wife to Ohio, but what she will do there has not yet been decided. Mrs. Randall came into the city last evening with Mr. Covey and stopping at the Metropolitan hotel. This morning's Denver train will bring Mr. Randall into the city. He will stay in Omaha over Sunday and return to Millard in time to resume his work on Monday morning. In his efforts to reunite them much praise is due Mr. Covey who has AT LAST SUCCEEDED.

He Meets a Friend (?) at the B. & M. Depot Yesterday Morning and Accommodates Him With His Walker.

So long as the world stands just so long will there be "ackers" for the confidence men to "work" and they will never need to learn any new tricks, either, for the old ones will never be worn threadbare.

Yesterday about seven o'clock a. m. a young man by the name of Richard Fay put in an appearance at the B. & M. depot and had his trunk checked to Hebron, this state. He then entered the waiting room to await the arrival of the train. There in the waiting room was somewhat foul, so he stepped outside the door to enjoy the fresh and invigorating air of the morning. While leaning against a corner of the building, apparently satisfied with himself and all the world, he was approached by a nice, gentlemanly appearing fellow who accosted him thusly:

"Good morning," said the stranger. "Which way are you going?" asked the stranger.

"Down to Hebron to visit a sister who is living there."

"Have you a farm near Hebron?" continued the slick one.

"No, but my sister owns a large farm only a few miles from that place. Her name is Mrs. Fagan."

"Oh, yes," said the "con" man. "I know her well. I own a large farm only a mile from her land and see her almost daily when I am at home. I am going to Hebron to-day and my bag to have met you. Just leave your baggage and let us go up town and have some coffee before time for the train."

The young man from "Wisconsin" was very glad to have met with the stranger, and started up town with him. They were walking up Tenth street, when a third party stopped them and shook hands with the "con" man. The new comer was introduced to the young man from Wisconsin, as an old time friend, and the two left the "greeny" standing alone while they stepped to one side and indulged in a little conversation.

In a moment the "greeny" was approached by stranger No. 1, who explained that he was indebted to the new comer to the extent of $225, and that he wanted his money as he desired to leave town. He said he had a check, but as the banks were not open it was useless to him, and asked Fay if he would loan him $225 until they got to Hebron, and take the check as security.

OF COURSE Fay would do that for a gentleman and immediately produced the cash and handed it over to stranger No. 1, who in turn handed it over to stranger No. 2, who then disappeared.

They then proceeded up the street a little way farther, when the stranger introduced Fay to let him have the check while he stepped up a stairway to have it receipted. Fay gave up the check and waited for the stranger at the foot of the stairs. He waited for a half hour when he ascended the stairs and found a back stairway, and it then dawned upon him that he had been robbed.

He went to the city marshal's office and related his story and an officer was detailed to work up the case, but it is hopeless as the fellow undoubtedly skipped over into Iowa.

THE BEB reporter called at the marshal's office yesterday and there found the foolish young man. "OH," he said, "I was robbed of my money and I thought he would appreciate the favor so much and might be able to do something for me when we got to Hebron, but I did need that money so much." Here the young man broke down and sobbed as if his heart would break, but it was useless, he had been fleeced and the fleecer had gone.

He said he was 24 years of age and had lived near New York, Wisconsin. He had always read the newspapers and had read a great deal about confidence games.

Luckily for him he still had $35, which he took him safely to his journey's end, and in the future he will doubtless be very careful as to his acquaintances, and will require security before parting with his money.

ANOTHER WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENT.

FAY & CO., formerly of Minneapolis, Minn., will open a wholesale confectionery, cigar and fruit business, in a few weeks, at the old stand of Piercey & Bradford on Farnam street.

Another Victim. A farmer named George Robinson, from Sarpy county, was robbed near the B. & M. depot in this city last evening. He was standing in a crowd watching the B. & M. train as it left, when a man sneaked by in a dark coat and cap and ran. Later in the evening a man named William Henry Harrison was arrested on suspicion of being the guilty party. He was given over into the hands of Deputy Sheriff Pieronnet, who took him to the city jail. His bond was fixed at $1,000, which was furnished, Henry Hornberger being his surety. His examination was set for to-day at 2 p. m. The thief secured only $15.

The new "Science of Life" far surpasses all previous editions of this great work. Embossed cloth covers, full gilt, contains a fine medal engraving of the author, with commendatory resolutions of the National Medical Association engraved on steel. Read the advertisement in another column.

YELLOWSTONE PARK.

The Unpaid Employees of the Improvement Company Only Half Clothed and Half Fed. C. H. Hendricks, of the civil engineering corps in the employ of Lieut. Daniel G. Kingman, United States army engineer officer on Gen. Howard's staff arrived in this city yesterday. He was tired in a big fur coat and cap and looked as if he had come from a cold country. Lieut. Kingman is in charge of the engineering work in the park, and has engaged for a government appropriation of $210,000 to aid in the construction of roads and bridges. Mr. Hendricks says he had been in Washington lead to the belief that his appropriation will be granted, in which case 500 men will be put to work as soon as the snow will permit. Mr. Hendricks says he is in condition to know that Superintendent P. H. Conger has been

GRAND OPENING.

An Elegant Billiard Hall Opened in This City Last Evening.

Thursday Mr. Will C. Bryan opened a temperance billiard hall in J. I. Redick's block, No. 1511 Farnam street. The place is a model of neatness and elegance, and is thoroughly equipped throughout. Six beautiful new tables of the J. M. Brunswick & Balke Co.'s make were kept running during the opening evening. The tables are most excellent ones, as every one who was fortunate enough to play upon them testified. They were supplied by Mr. Hochstetler, the company's agent at this place.

Mr. Bryan is a gentlemanly and accommodating young man, and will conduct his place in such a manner that he cannot fail to secure a large patronage.

much abused, and that he is completely overridden by the members of the National Park Improvement company, who run matters in the park with a high hand. Game is plentiful, and depredations are not committed. The employees of the improvement company, however, are in a bad way. There are about thirty-five of them, and they haven't had any pay for six months. Yet through the winter they worked faithfully and well, both those employed about the hotel and those at the sawmill outside the reservation. They have been on half rations since November—the commonest sort of food, no coffee, sugar, or butter, but milk meat, and potatoes they raised themselves last fall. They are almost without clothing, many of them wrapping their feet in rags. A month ago the thirty-five men took possession of the mammoth hot springs hotel and announced that they would not give way to a Rufus Hatch receiver or to any one else who didn't come with money in hand to pay them. The snow is six feet deep by actual measurement, and they can't get out of the country. It is stated at Livingston that Rufus Hatch gave the rest of the company three weeks to raise $300,000. He agreed to raise $70,000 in the same time. This would pay the men and the $300,000 due merchants in Montana, Dakota, and Minnesota.
